Values and Ethics for Development Professionals

I don't want to do anything that violates my own personal code of ethics and morals.

... Michael Moore

Back ground

Every individual and every organisation is involved in making hundreds of decisions every day. The decisions we make are a reflection of our values and ethics. Many of our professional decisions involve ethics. Ethical behavior is equally important in the workplace as it is in our personal lives. Many professions and corporations have developed codes of ethics to address their unique work situations. A professional code of ethics sets a standard, which each member of the profession is expected to meet. It is a promise to act in a manner that protects the public's well-being. A professional code of ethics informs the public what to expect of one's doctor, government official, lawyer, accountant, or property manager. Ethics and Morals enable us to know where to draw lines, and also highlight to us the lines we should never cross.

Objectives of training: At the end of the training the participants will be able to

1. Gain knowledge on the importance of Values and Ethics in personal and professional development.
2. Identify the challenges faced when values and ethics are practiced.
3. Understand the ways and means to improve Values and Ethics.

Pedagogy

Various techniques and pedagogy are adopted in this course to help participants to feel the best touch of reality. Over last couple of years, pedagogy in the management education is changing very fast and one of the latest additions in this field is the management games. Pedagogy techniques and games employed in this training convey knowledge and skills in ways that participants can understand, remember and apply.
